

TWO OF A KIND

ORSON Welles famously said, "Style is knowing who you are, what you want to say, and not giving a damn." This season designers adopt an adventurous attitude, pairing bold, contrasting colours that rather than clashing, work to enhance a look. Blue is matched with red, purple with orange, gold and maroon, partnering to exude fresh, fun, and vibrancy on the runway.

Phillip Lim uses a colour palette to transform orange and blue into an excellent duo of vivid colour which combines various textures of fabric. The jacket, is clean cut with a gloss finish, a futuristic approach on a classic crop jacket shape. Paired with relaxed fit pants, similar to Resene Satin Orange, the two pieces work well together to achieve an overall effortless style in line with current trends.

Creatures of Comfort play with oversizing and relaxed shapes in their latest collection, opting for a blue on blue colour pallet for this look matched by Resene Whale Tail. Casual chic in a cool tone, this combination will be appearing on the streets of London, a stand out look without being extreme.

Dark contrasting binding ensures the coat doesn't look washed out in a wave of light blue and defines the delicate craftsmanship.

Simplicity is the keynote of elegance. Kate Spade had Coco Chanel's voice in mind when she engineered this collection. Chic and simplistic, this look retains an element of youth by incorporating bold block colours. The pants, similar to Resene Howzat, are clean and flattering with a straight cut, clean hem, and no unnecessary detail. The key design in this look is in the silhouette. Slightly off the body, Spade toys with ideas of masculine shapes, whilst hemming the pants just above the ankle to retain a feminine appearance.

In unique Thakoon style, this season the designer presents a jacket in full futuristic mode. The intricacy of the garment cut isn't diminished by loud colours or patterns with beige similar to Resene Paper Doll allowing the eye to absorb subtle details achieved by a true mastery of garment manipulation and pattern cutting.

Paired with a simple green dress, similar to Resene Emerald, the overall look is a testimony to Thakoon's skill in the creation of unusual shapes that challenge modern fashion design concepts.
